NEW COUNTRIES.

There appears to be a growing tendency to imagine that the only way necessary to secure the development and general welfare of a new country is to rush on settlement without the slightest regard to the fitness or unfitness of the intended settler for the condition of affairs with which he will have to cope in the fresh order of things which must necessarily surround him in the new country in which he is induced to throw in his lot. There are several causes at work to bring about this utterly unsatisfactory state of things. Of course it is natural enough that in countries which have become over-populated, that is where the population in consequence of an artificial social state has become larger than can be supported by the natural productive powers of the land inhabited, these members of society who have managed to survive this unnatural condition of things, should, recognising the law of humanity requiring them to make some provision for the actual existence of their weaker brethren, find the easiest plan to shunt them off to the countries which are making every effort to advertise their want of a population to occupy their vacant lands. That this may be a wise policy for the old countries may be allowed, but while the worldly wisdom may be admitted, the morality or even the humanity of the proceeding seems more than doubtful. In a general broad way there seems little reason to dispute the logical correctness of that doctrine which in the hands of Darwin surprised the whole and outraged a large proportion of the civilized world, viz.—"the survival of the fittest," so it is not unnatural to ask whether those who have succumbed in the struggle for existence under the ameliorated social condition of an aged civilization, are the suitable subjects to select to overcome the vastly greater natural difficulties of a new country. It may be said that nature, just as when left to herself she produces a population such as a country can support, so will she regulate the emigration from one unnaturally over-populated, but unfortunately in this respect artificial civilization is interfering in the natural selection of nature; and instead of leaving the strong and energetic who require a larger field wherein to exercise their energies to emigrate, holds out false hopes and promises, and having done so furnishes the necessary assistance to the weak fit, to try their fortune in a land, where they believe their path must be strewn with flowers. Now, however much the people who adopt this policy may at the expense of morality benefit materially, by just so much must the new country suffer. Of course we do not pretend to deal with individual instances in detail, for undoubtedly there are cases in which the new surroundings call forth dormant energies and produce successful results of a most startling nature, but these are few and far between. What we mean to say is that on the whole the policy of encouraging assisted emigration to a new country, is hurtful to that country as well as inimical to the subject of the experiment. To illustrate in a most general way what constitutes our contention, it seems to require no demonstration that if a new district be crowded up by men without the physical strength, the necessary knowledge and endurance to make self-supporting farmers, their very presence numerically will induce numbers of others of a different class to choose the same locality for their operations. Naturally enticed by a numerically promising settlement, storekeepers and mechanics collect. The end is easily foreseen. The naturally unfit succumb—they exist for a time on credit—those who might have otherwise done well find the deficit of the weak members cast by the merchants on their shoulders, this extra burden they are unable to bear, the merchants are ruined by over competition, and the end is universal failure. We want settlers here, as much as elsewhere, but unless they are able to support themselves, or are capitalists who can furnish work for laborers of all kinds, we would rather be without them. As it is we have no large capitalists to be benefited by a useless paper class of emigrant who will reduce to enrich them by thanklessly taking work at starvation wages.

The Klontom expedition will have a stretch of 600 miles before it after reaching Dongola, continuing eastwards said to be as bad as anything before that point. It is calculated that should no delay occur at Dongola and an average progress of 10 miles a day be made, Klontom might be relieved by the middle of February, should Col. Gordon hold out so long. In any case the hot weather so dangerous to British troops will then begin. The Canadian's call their work a dirty job—the rivers being so small that they cannot see rocks and stones under water, as in our own rivers. Expenses promise to immensely exceed estimates, and the whole business although now, thanks to the Government's policy, inevitable, is most discouraging. Lord Wolsey says it is the toughest job he has had yet.

On Wednesday, 17th ult., the great conservative demonstration in honor of Sir John A. Macdonald was held. A careful perusal of the Premier's speech does not disclose any indication of the intention of the government with regard to the North West, which is the more disappointing from the fact that he is supposed when in England to have been in conference with the Imperial Government touching matters nearly concerning the North West interests. It may be however that he did not consider the occasion a suitable one for disclosing his intentions. He stated inter alia that the C. P. R. will be opened to the Columbia River next March and to the Pacific Ocean next autumn. He indulged in extremely pleasing prognostications with regard to the future of the N. W. Territories should its progress not be impeded by the attacks of the opposition and of the people themselves as represented by the Farmer's Union. If, as is asserted, Mr. Norquay has been assuring Sir John of his utmost confidence in his policy and pledging him the support of the province which he represents, we can only consistently infer that he has good reason to expect a more favorable reception of the Bill of Rights than was accorded to it when presented some ten months ago. Time will show.

CURLING.

On Tuesday last the old country team played off for the medal won by them from the Canada last week. The medal is a beautiful one, presented by Mr. H. Macdonald, brother of D. H. Macdonald M. N. W. C., by whose team it was won, and who then the President of the Club presents it immediately after the conclusion of the game. The medal was not in good condition as it was very fortunate this season, as this is the second medal won by teams skipped by him. The game was:

T. J. Agnew, J. W. Macdonald, Wm. Miller, W. A. Nairn, T. N. Campbell, Jas. Henderson, Macdonald, skip, 13; J. Sinclair, skip, 13. Majority for Macdonald's skis.

A very interesting match was played on the rink on Saturday last between two rinks chosen by Messrs Jas. Sinclair and G. T. Brown for an Easter supper. The players and game stood:

R. Middleton, H. J. Montgomery, B. Gibbons, A. J. Goodfellow, Jas. Henderson, Graham Nelson, G. T. Brown, skip, G. Jas. Sinclair, skip, 3. Majority for Brown's.

Just received at Clark's Drug Store, Gray's Syrup of Spruce Gum (Gummi), Hygrade's Peppermint Balm, B. B. Bitters, also a full assortment of Diamond Dyes.

A bunch of keys on a ring, with A. B. Burn's name on a clip attached, was lost between this office and the skating rink on the evening of the carnival. Finder will confer a favor by leaving them at Taz Times office.

There was a discussion last month in the House of Lords about a subject of the last importance to England and all her colonies, viz.—the unprotected state of our coaling stations abroad. Of course in time of war neutral coaling stations are closed to belligerents, and as our war ships can only carry a few days supply, it will put a nation with so many colonies and such vast mercantile interests into a pretty position should she be unable to hold her own stations at which to take in coal.

The recent appointment of Capt. Dean as superintendent of the Regina District is said to be causing dissatisfaction amongst the other officers of the force. The appointment has been made over the heads of men who have been ten or twelve years in the service, and the new superintendent is stated to be a blissfully ignorant of Indian negotiation that a junior has to assist him when anything important turns up. This is not the first instance of late of unsatisfactory appointments in the Mounted Police. What was there in either his record or his standing, ever justified the appointment of Inspector Morris, late of Calgary? Such an appointment justifies a gaining belief that a man's "record" has been having little of late to do with his promotion. Men like Inspector Steel, of long service and acknowledged ability, are the ones to promote, and not men whose only "records" are of their luck and not of their deserts. Calgary Herald.
